Thirty-Three More Die in Ohio as State Awaits Promised Relief.
MARK AT NOON HERE 88

At East Liverpool Temperature Is 117 in Sun and 107 in Shade.

Cool breezes and the sun partially clouded lowered the temperature from 97, the high mark of the year set yesterday afternoon to 88 at 11:30 a. m. today. The 88 is six degrees lower than the temperature at the same hour yesterday. The heat claimed 33 lives in Ohio in the last 24 hours, through heat prostrations and drownings. Cooler weather tonight in the west and north sections of the state and in the south portion Saturday, with occasional showers, was promised by the weather bureau today.

Night's Low 72
Last night's lowest temperature here was 72. A year ago the high was 75 and the low was 50. Theodore Minshall of Carhart street, who suffered a sunstroke yesterday afternoon at the Union depot, is in an unimproved condition at his home today. Mrs. Minshall said.

Omni Yumm, mechanic at the Richmond Motor Sales Co., was prostrated by the heat yesterday morning and fell unconscious in front of the garage. With the heat wave having taken a toll of 33 lives in Ohio, lost through prostration and drowning, during the last 24 hours, the state today anxiously awaited fulfillment of the weather man's prediction of cooling thunderstorms.

Lightning, which accompanied brief showers in two localities yesterday caused two additional deaths, Associated Press dispatches said. Many persons also suffered prostrations. Large cities of the state, including Toledo, Dayton, and Youngstown, turned their resources over to alleviation of suffering. The heat was so intense in Fayette county that wheat harvest was hampered, harvest hands became ill and horses fell dead.

Occupied Coal Mines
The cool depths of coal mines were occupied by entire families at Pomeroy. In Mansfield 75 per cent of the workers at the Mansfield Tire & Rubber Co. became ill and the factory was closed until Monday. Intense heat operations at Akron were curtailed.

The high temperature caused highways in numerous places to expand and "explode." Fifteen explosions were reported in Ashland county, and in Seneca county highway workers were kept busy repairing pavements "blown up." As a section of a city boulevard in East Liverpool expanded, bricks were thrown into the air.

A cow, believed to have become crazed by heat attacked a farmer near Fremont who killed it after he had jumped a fence to safety. A dog being clipped of its hair at

Special to The Star
BUCYRUS, July 3.—Arguments in behalf of Blanton and Walter Ralls in the petitions of error protesting against their conviction in the local common pleas court of the murder of Sheriff George Crawford, last January, were being heard by the court of appeals in the local courtroom today. The men are now in the state penitentiary awaiting execution, July 23.

Attorneys representing the men are Louis Kreiter of Galion and Elmer Lutz and Arden Wiseman of this city. Setting up more than a dozen claims of error of the court in degrading changes of venue and that the indictment under which they were convicted did not charge first degree murder, the two men carried their fight against the electric chair to the court of appeals after new trials had been denied in the local court.

The court of appeals is comprised of Judges Charles L. Justice, William Kittinger and Harry W. Lloyd, the latter substituting for Judge Phil Crow who was unable to sit in the case. Judge Lloyd is from Toledo.

REDISTRIBUTION OF SCHOOL PUPILS MADE

Board Transfers Pupils To Enable Closing of Two Old Buildings.

The distribution of pupils among buildings in the city for the coming school term, including the allocation of pupils to the new junior high school building in Oakland Heights which will be put in use for the first time next September, was tentatively outlined by the city board of education in a special meeting last night.

The tentative distribution will be studied by board members in preparation for final action on the distribution in August before the opening of the school term. The tentative distribution will place 500 pupils in the new junior high school, 625 in the Central junior high, and 325 in the Vernon Heights junior high. The board also made a number of teacher and custodian appointments, let two contracts for supplies, and slightly revised the course of studies for several grades.

No Overcrowding
Through careful planning for the future in the school building program adopted several years ago, the board said, it will be able to accommodate all pupils without overcrowding any building.

Supt. George A. Bowman said today. Also, it will be possible to vacate two antiquated and obsolete buildings which were unfit for use and expensive to maintain.

The buildings to be closed are the Lincoln and David street buildings, both four-room schools. Opening of the new junior high school building in Oakland Heights will relieve overcrowded conditions in several buildings, particularly in the Oakland Heights elementary building where classes were conducted last year in the basement.

THOUSANDS OF FANS GATHER FOR BATTLE

Fight Hysteria Grips Cleveland on Day of Championship Match.

By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, July 3.—Fight hysteria gripped Cleveland today as thousands of fans whined away the hours before the long send Young Stribling and Max Schmeling smashing at each other for the heavyweight championship tonight.

Hotels were choked with tight fans, milkshakes and newspapermen. Early in the morning auto mobiles poured into the city from all around, bringing fans by the hundreds. Others were coming by special trains, airplanes and even by yacht.

The rank and file of fightdom took it seriously, too. A line formed this morning in front of the windows where 10,000 general admission tickets were offered at the $3 minimum.

The weather relented from the oppressive temperatures of the last week. Cooling breezes from Lake Erie dropped the mercury down into the 70s. The prediction that thundershowers predicted for today will pass by tomorrow and be followed by a clear, warm day, suitable for celebrating the 150th year of the independence of the United States.

JULY 4 TO BE QUIET DAY FOR MARIONITES

Other Towns in District, However, Plan To Celebrate Holiday.

Marionites must rely on their own resources for a "grand and glorious Fourth" for no demonstration or celebration of any nature has been planned in the city. A great many, no doubt, will seek lake-side beaches and resorts for the weekend, if the heat wave remains unbroken. Others probably will resort to picnics and wind up the day with a modest display of fireworks outside the city limits.

Firecrackers and explosives of any kind are taboo in Marion. Police Chief William E. Marks has warned. No fireworks have been allowed in the city for several years, due to the danger of personal injury and fire damage. Fireworks are available at a number of bootleg stands located just outside the city limits on all main roads.

A general suspension of business will mark the holiday here. A majority of business places and all public offices including the court, house, city hall and the postoffice, will close for the day.

A number of towns and villages in the district are planning celebrations. Marion will make the holiday a homecoming affair for all former Marion residents with a picnic on the school house lawn and fireworks scheduled for entertainment.

Lafayette will observe a safe and sane Fourth with a band concert. Continued on Page Twelve

Youths Start on Last Lap of Long Canoe Voyage

By United Press
CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—Two Chicago youths, Dick Grant and Moore Larny, today were to paddle away from Cleveland on the last lap of a "round the States" canoe voyage that already has taken them 5,150 miles.

Arriving here after an eventful trip up the Atlantic seaboard and through the Erie canal into the Great Lakes, the two bronzed adventurers spent the night at the coast guard station. They were to leave for Chicago and home, estimating it would take them five weeks to complete the journey.

The paddlers left Chicago Sept. 28 in a 16-foot, 60-pound canoe, they said. They traveled down the Mississippi river to the gulf of Mexico, and thence into the Atlantic ocean. Grant told of encounters with sharks, alligators and once octopus.

"We spent two and a half days on a bird barge during an ocean storm," Grant said. "We returned several times from sea captains along the route."

GOVERNOR GRANTS ROUTE 30 HEARING

Representatives of Four Cities To Get Audience with White.

Representatives of four cities along the present route who are protesting the transfer of the highway to a northern route will get a hearing before Gov. George White and Highway Director O. W. Merrell Tuesday at 10:30 a. m., according to an International News Service dispatch from Columbus.

The hearing was granted by the governor after representatives of Lima, Kenton, Marion and Galion requested an audience following a meeting here last Monday in which a resolution was adopted requesting the governor to withhold erection of route 30 markers on the northern road. Representatives of the four cities want the erection of the markers on the new road through Delphos, Upper Sandusky, Bucyrus and Mansfield delayed until they can file an appeal with the American Association of State Highway Officials which changed recently.

ANOTHER PARLEY CALLED

Advices from Paris Bring Increased Optimism to United States Capital.

By The Associated Press
PARIS, July 3.—There are fairly reasonable prospects that accord between the French and American negotiations will be achieved by tonight, a person in authority said this afternoon. This informant declared that no agreement on the Hoover war debt plan had yet been completed.

WASHINGTON, July 3.—American officials, after communication with Secretary Mellon in Paris today said they "hoped and expected" the completion of negotiations between the United States and France on President Hoover's debt suspension proposal before night.

Acting Secretary Castle of the state department and Acting Secretary Mills of the treasury met with Eugene Meyer, chairman of the federal reserve board, in President Hoover's office to receive the telephone call from Secretary Mellon.

President Hoover was not present when the conversation took place as he was presiding over his regular Friday cabinet meeting.

The officials said they did not expect any definite announcement until after Secretary Mellon and Ambassador Edge held their conference late today in Paris.

Look for Agreement
The cheerfulness restored by optimistic reports from Paris, officials here looked today for a speedy agreement on the moratorium.

They saw a possibility that the last differences between France and the United States would be eliminated at a conference in Paris today by Mellon and Edge, with Premier Laval.

The year's holiday from reparations and war debt payments, suggested by President Hoover two weeks ago tomorrow as a means of improving the world economic condition, involves the transfer of nearly a billion dollars.

President Hoover declined to forego war debt collections of about $250,000,000, provided other countries would agree to suspension of reparations payments, to them on the following approximate amounts:

France $240,000,000, Great Britain $97,000,000, Italy $51,000,000, Belgium $27,000,000, Romania $20,000,000, Greece $15,000,000, Portugal $10,000,000, Japan $3,000,000, and Poland $10,000,000. The United States also had $15,700,000 due in reparations before July 1, 1932.

After another of his numerous transatlantic telephone talks with Secretary Mellon, acting Secretary Castle of the state department said yesterday he was "very optimistic" over prospects for an accord.

Although Laval declined to elaborate upon the statement, it was clear that the United States and France were compromising their

Sees War Debt Plan as Opening to Better Times

By The Associated Press
PARIS, July 3.—Ambassador Walter E. Edge, in a speech read at a luncheon day dinner of the American Chamber of Commerce in France, tonight predicted the acceptance of President Hoover's debt proposals would restore "the confidence necessary for economic recovery."

The ambassador had intended to deliver his message in person at the dinner, but because of a conference with French officials and Secretary Mellon on the reparations problem it became necessary to revise his plans.

General Stanley Ford, military attaché at the American embassy, was designated to read the address. However, ambassador Edge and Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, planned to visit the dinner briefly during the evening as a mark of respect to President Doumer, who was the guest of honor.

Mr. Edge's address described President Hoover's program for a year's suspension of debt payments as "a brilliant flash to a darkened and burdened universe."

"The effect," he said, "was electrical, and the world waits with confident hope this significant effort wherein the United States without hesitation, and of income at a time when she is facing a billion dollar deficit, is doing the greatest sacrifice of any nation in the world—will assume the confidence necessary for economic recovery."

Milk Fund Exhausted, Babies Face Real Crisis

Red Cross Makes Appeal for Money To Provide Food for Infants; Many Are Undernourished in City, Welfare Workers Say.

What is to be done for milk for the small and undernourished children of the city has become a problem of vital importance to Red Cross workers and others having to do with child welfare work in the city.

A small amount of money has been received for the milk fund as the result of a recent appeal, but the amount, according to the welfare workers, will fall far short of that needed if these children are to receive their proper portion of milk each day.

No money for this purpose is provided by the Community Fund, it is explained by the workers, and since the families to which these small and undernourished children belong, are mostly large and the grocery orders they receive from the relief department, provide barely enough of the cost of food, the babies and small children are compelled to subsist on these funds.

A young mother, tired and worn and carrying a small baby, appeared at the Red Cross headquarters several days ago with the story that the doctor had told her that her baby, which she said was suffering from malnutrition, must have milk daily. She said she had no money with which to buy the milk and that the small amount they received for groceries must go for heavier foods.

Many cases such as this, are facing the welfare workers, they say, and unless they are able to continue the supply of milk for these babies and children, it can only result in more undernourished children and possibly an increase in the death rate among these unfortunate.

Last year through the kindness of local clubs and a number of private individuals, a milk fund was created from which each organization dealing in child welfare were privileged to draw. This has now been exhausted and an appeal for help is being made by each of the organizations.

One quart of milk daily costs 13 cents a month, the welfare workers say, and one quart of milk may save the life of a baby or a child. Any person wishing to help in this work are asked to mail checks to the Red Cross office in the Y. M. C. A. building.

DRUNKS WANE IN NUMBER IN JUNE

Arrests for Intoxication Decrease, Police Report Shows.

A marked decrease in the number of arrests for intoxication during the month of June compared to the last several months, is shown in the report of the police department for the month, released today by Chief of Police Dr. T. E. Sonnichsen.

Fourteen arrests for intoxication were made during the month and one for driving an automobile while intoxicated. There were three arrests for illegal possession during the 30 days, also the smallest number in the last several months.

The total arrests for the month, according to the report, were 94. The report also shows that four automobiles were taken and six were recovered, the six were valued at $1,800. There were also 12 bicycles taken and 10 recovered, the value of the 10 given as $112. The police also recovered other merchandise valued at $150, bringing the total of recovered property to $2,112.

The report shows that police responded to 196 calls, received 276 complaints, made five searches and and looked 135 "floaters."

WANTS TO MEET REUNION HEADS

Bauer's Engagement to Photograph Groups Carries No Obligation To Buy.

He is always on the job. With his complete photographic outfit
always ready for instant use, Adam Bauer may be seen making a picture record of Marion county events that will be of interest to many of its residents. His library of pictures have proven of great value many times. When pictures taken of past events are needed to complete a collection or to be used in a special program they may be found among the thousands of others on file in Bauer's studio.

Bauer has pictures of rural school activities that will prove very interesting to his subjects in a few years. This year he photographed some of the graduating classes and closing day exercises in many Marion county rural schools.
These records he has in both snapshots and on home movie film.

The photograph pictured at the right was taken of the Boy Scout troop No. 3 of the Epworth M. E. church. These Scouts, and other troops were on duty during the re-morial dedication and were of great assistance in handling the crowds.
Epworth troop No. 3 is under the leadership of Dr. V. C. Kiesel.

Has Best Equipment
By keeping in step with the latest developments in the field of photography, Adam Bauer has equipped his studio with the best cameras and photographic equipment of the day.

He is equipped to take photographs of banquets and smaller indoor groups. For outdoor work where he must photograph large groups of persons or a whole series of buildings, he possesses or circuit camera, takes excellent pictures under most any condition.

At this time of the year family reunions are being held almost daily. Mr. Bauer would like to meet the secretaries for this year of each reunion group. His being engaged to photograph the reunion places them under no obligation for a specified number of prints to be purchased. Hardly a week passes but what someone comes into Bauer's studio for a print from a reunion or group picture taken in the last few years. Perhaps in this group there is a relative or friend who has passed away and having no photograph to remember the lost one by they depend on Adam Bauer to supply it. By photographing each reunion group he maintains a file of negatives from which prints may be made at any time.

Carries Big Line
At his studio Mr. Bauer carries a complete stock of cameras, film and home movie supplies. He will rent movie cameras to persons desiring to record events the modern motion picture way.

According to Bauer the demand for the new vichrome film is daily becoming greater. This new film is more sensitive to color and produces with better contrast.

With the introduction of this film
the competition in the Eastman picture contest is very keen. This contest is open to any amateur in the United States, Hawaii or Alaska excepting individuals engaged in the manufacture, sale, commercial finishing or professional use of photographic goods.

In the U. S. A. alone $25,000 in prizes is being offered. This contest closes Aug. 31, 1931. Complete rules may be obtained at Bauer's studio when you purchase your

BAUER SNAPS BOY SCOUT TROOP

Mirrors Add Light, Size to Room

BY MARGERY TAYLOR
Interior Decoration Editor, McCall's
Magazine.

New and novel uses for mirrors
are being discovered almost every day.

film or have it developed there.

Perhaps a snapshot taken over the Fourth will be just the one the judges would choose as one of the winners. Just take your films to Bauer's studio Monday to have them developed. Ask for an "Ist-man contest entry blank and send your best pictures in. Who can tell your picture may be a winner.

Not mere tricks or whims, they are often very useful in changing a whole room, or in getting the utmost in decorative value out of what is already there.

Is the room too small? Mirrors
in just the right places will expand
it. Is there a dark corner? A mirrored scene will bring light to it.

Is one part of the room dull?
You don't need new furniture.
Simply repeat the interest of some other part of the room or the beauty of a window scene by reflecting it in a mirror.

For instance, what is to be put on the wall above a box sofa flanked by trim end tables, when there are already too many pictures in the room? The answer is a strip of mirror over each table,

catching the reflection of bright spots elsewhere in the room.

Unframed mirrors express a new vogue, the strips of mirror glass,
even as narrow as six or eight inches, sometimes "making" a room.

These mirrors are held in place
by glass rosettes or metal clasps.
They are particularly pleasing between windows, beside a door in a narrow hallway or at the far end of a long room.

The variety of clever touches in using mirrors is endless. A corner cupboard has its glass and china display multiplied delightfully by a lining of mirror glass. A simple picture is transformed when framed with a mirror mat—the effect on an ordinary flower print
is amazing.

A stroke of genius appears when mirror glass instead of clear glass is used in a window which has an unpleasant view.

And as for the real moderns,
they want walls, ceilings or whole
rooms lined with mirrors.

Skyscrapers Called Paying Investments

Lee H. Miller, chief engineer of American Institute of Steel Construction, addressed leading contractors, architects and building material dealers.

Mr. Miller's subject was "Putting Value Into Building."

"Popular imagination," said Mr.
Miller, "is easily swayed because it does not think. It is especially responsible to modern fairy tales.
Among these I class the delusion that skyscrapers are built purely for advertising purposes, and that few of them pay for their investment."

Mr. Miller also said in his talk,
"that 53 per cent of our building
construction is waste."

Policies Adapted to Needs of
All Persons: Is Old Line
Conservative Firm.

For eighteen years the Ohio State Life Insurance Co. has served its policyholders in Marion county
through its branch office now located in the Marion County bank building. This is the silver anniversary year of the company, and thoroughly its years of progress deserved takes rank as the House of Thrifty and Protection. The policy contracts are diversified for protection and investment.

To the average persons many pertinent facts deserve consideration.

Where will you be at age 65—
Working, dependent, retired?
There is going to be an old man
dependent on you someday.

Not your brother, but yourself.
What are you laying aside for his happiness, comfort and sustenance?

Where will you be at age 65?
Life insurance statistics tell us that but ten out of every hundred men arriving at age 65 are self-sustaining. The others are working from necessity—at an old man's uncertain wage—dependent on their families or on public charity.

If you live your declining years
in comfort, paying your own way,
you must make such provision now
while you have health and opportunity, or you may find yourself ill, your family in want, their future uncertain and dependent.

One of the real tragedies of life
is total and permanent disability.
When the father becomes totally and permanently disabled through accident or sickness, as so often happens, the family not only loses its means of support but must also assume the additional burden of caring for its disabled member.

Here your life insurance steps in and provides a definite monthly income for life, or as long as disability exists; and, in addition, relieves you of making further deposits on your life insurance estate
and your estate is intact.

A stroke of the pen will not only provide for your declining years and carry you over a period of total and permanent disability, but creates an immediate estate that is available in cash to your family
with the delay of probate court proceedings, should the unforeseen happen and you be taken.

Unworried is the mind of the man who is serenely confident that his future, and that of his family,
is fully protected and that his plans
made for them will be fulfilled,
should he be taken.

Old Age Dependency

The famous table, once credited to the American Bankers' association, showing the economic life history of 100 "average men" probably has no factual standing. However, the proportion of men who reach age 65 with anything approaching a competence is undoubtedly low.

The answers to a questionnaire circulated among almost 15,000 persons over 65 years of age and quoted by the National Civic federations, are significant:

Out of 14,815 persons, 40.3 per

INSURANCE COMPANY OFFICES

cent had incomes under $1,000 a year; 24.0 per cent had incomes of $1,000 to $1,999; 16.5 per cent had incomes of $2,000 and over; 19.2 per cent had no annual income; 29.6 per cent owned no property; 8.4
per cent owned up to $999; 5.1 per cent owned $1,000 to $1,999; 10.6
per cent owned $2,000 to $2,999; 9.2
per cent owned $3,000 to $4,999; 10.6
per cent owned $5,000 to $7,499;
6.1 per cent owned $7,500 to $9,999;
25.6 per cent owned $10,000 or over.

One out of 100 had $10,000 or more life insurance and 21 out of 100 had $1,000 or more, but less than $10,000; 45 out of 100 had no
life insurance.

Everywhere we see hundreds and thousands of boys and girls who,
if only given the opportunity, would achieve success, but this they are denied.

Forced through circumstances to work for bare necessities while yet comparatively young, they are sacrificed to help provide for others
younger than themselves.

Do you realize that through Life
Insurance it is possible to guarantee that when your boy and your girl reach the age when they can rightly be expected to become wage-earners, they will be equipped to take their rightful place in their chosen field of endeavor and will not have to be sacrificed on the altar of necessity?

There is a plan of insurance especially adapted to the needs of the home, whereby your family
may enjoy the benefits of a continuous and uninterrupted income.
Life Insurance Is Good Property
Present and future values are guaranteed.

It constantly appreciates in value.

Not only are future values guaranteed, but they always are available in liquid form. Life insurance property never freezes up.

Under no circumstances can life
insurance property become a liability. It always is an asset.

It is the only form of property
which can be transferred direct to the heirs, without a cent of shrinkage.

It is the only form of property
upon which unpaid balances are cancelled by death, and the property transferred unencumbered to the heirs.

It is the property which is purchased upon a strictly one-price-to-all basis.

Life insurance is as definitely a form of property as is a farm, a house, a bond, a stock, or a savings account, and it possesses merits and advantages that make it, for the average man, the most valuable property that can be owned.

Three per cent of all the money invested in the United States goes into Life Insurance, but eighty-seven per cent of all inherited estates is composed of Life Insurance.

Ideal Method of Thrift

We think of an estate as a collection of property that is left when a rich man dies. In reality it is the carefully planned fund
that is to carry on whenever fate
decides it is time.

One's value, over and above his abilities, is his estate. It includes all property and possessions.
But in the sense of its widest general acceptance it is the property left after death.

The total amount of all money invested in this country compared with the receipts of Life Insurance companies shows that only three per cent of the total goes into this form of investment. Yet, a comparison of the assets that compose the estates of all deceased persons show eighty-seven per cent of the total to be composed of Life Insurance. The reasons for these facts are obvious. The value of a man's estate may be very little,
but if he takes out several thousand dollars of life insurance his estate has increased in cash value exactly that many thousand dollars the moment the insurance is in effect.

Teach Child How To Spend Money Rather Than Be Miser, Bureau Experts Advocate

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 3.—The little boy who puts all his pennies in his metal bank no longer is ranked by the United States children's bureau as the shining financial example for childhood.

In his stead, the bureau today set up the ideal as an American child who spends wisely, saves wisely and gives wisely.

Children should not be taught to be little misers, the child experts admonished in a special study, "The Child and His Money."

"A savings bank into which pennies disappear never to be used has relatively little training value."

Budget Plan Suggested

The bureau advocated that children be encouraged to spend money as a means of learning its use and value. It suggested a budget plan of putting small change into brightly colored envelopes—red envelopes for saving money, blue for spending money, green for giving away money, and so on.

The study was summarized in 10 financial training suggestions.

Give the child a regular fixed allowance, teach him not to beg and cease for additional money.

Record Shows Threat of Another Drouth

By International News Service

WASHINGTON, July 3.—Another dry summer will be recorded by the weather man, as records show a marked change in the next few months.

Although only a portion of the northwest is drought-stricken, records of the bureau for June show a deficiency in rainfall all over a large part of the nation.

In most parts of the 22-state drought belt so hard hit last year, there has been sufficient rainfall to bring good crop prospects, but not enough to replenish the soil.

Persistence Forces

words save an explosive. "Heaven! No!" But this patent disfigurement had no effect whatever upon Mrs. Arlen. She would make a rhinoceros of the Brixton house party would have both Tale boys and West Pointers as guests had had the same effect upon her that the sight of a loaded banquet table would have upon a starving person. I knew that she visioned unlimited admiration for herself and slight and consequent envious hatred upon the part of the other girls. Unhindered by personal dignity, with an imperviousness to the opinions of other girls and older people which would make a rhinoceros blush for his laurels she was marshaling every resource of wit and will she possessed to secure her sharing in the house party.

She had put her hand upon Noel's arm, and her clasp was so firm that I knew he could not step away from her without being absolutely rude.

"Naughty Noel!" to be so cross with Arlen, she cooed, and the sight of Noel's unhappy face would have aroused my sympathy if I had not been so busy suppressing an implicit desire to laugh.

"You must take back that 'No!' she went on, and there was something in her voice, elusive but plain, which betrayed the vixen concealed beneath her apparent sweetness. But when Noel stubbornly remained silent without even looking at her, she swiftly changed her tactics, hoping, I surmised, that by doing so she could conceal her disfigurement. She took her hand from his arm and turned to Mary with a little pout.

"He's just got one of his naughty stubborn fits," she confided. "And if he thinks I'm going to coax him out of it, he's mistaken." In her words and manner there was the same assumption of ownership that had been hers since her entrance with him. I knew that she was watching Mary narrowly, and I was proud of the aplomb with which my husband's winsome niece took the thrust and answered it.

Avis Changes Her Tactics
"You might try lighting a fire under him," she said, "carelessly, and as Marion giggled and Noel winced, there flashed across Avis Arlen's delicately tinted face a venomous look which for the instant made her look twice her years. It has gone the next instant and she smiled at Marion, smiling correctly that there was the least experienced and most easily confused of the three female opponents facing her. I knew that she was quick enough to recognize that Mary, Marion and I could all qualify in that class.

"I'm not going to waste any more time on a sulky boy," she said. "You're the one for whom this party is being given. I know. Noel's been telling me all about you and how popular you are with all the college boys. You're going to be charitable and let a poor, lonesome little girl from the outside have a look-in, aren't you? I'll promise not to go after your special one."

Madge Speaks Plainly
The challenge was obvious. "If you don't let me come with you, it's because you're afraid I'll take all the men away." She might as well have said, "I know that I saw the red flash into Marion's cheeks, and the instinctive, almost unconscious look of appeal she sent to me. I suddenly felt that the conventions of hospitality and courteous behavior were irksome chains. The desire to take Avis Arlen by the shoulders and turn her out of the house was almost overpowering.

"Why, I think that would be perfectly lovely," Marion stammered, bound by the schoolgirl convention that never under any circumstances must the "other girl" be given a chance to think you are afraid of her wiles. But I did not give her a chance to finish.

"It would be charming," I said courteously, but inexorably, "if it were possible. But Mrs. Brixton is very conventional, and is also very easily upset by any changing of plans. I happen to know that every room in her country place will be filled, and that she would be much embarrassed by extra guests."

"But I wouldn't care where I slept," Avis Arlen said with an air of child-like naivete, and I realized that I had to reckon with a persistent like a battering-ram. "Surely she could put a cot in the room with you two girls," she smiled widely at Mary and Marion. "That is not the question," I interposed hastily, to save the girls from answering. "I am afraid I must speak plainly, Miss Arlen. I do not know the custom of your friends, but I know my own and those of our friends. Mrs. Brixton would think it a grave social error if the invited guests to her home should bring other people with them. If there were time to consult her it would be different. But as it is, she would be so scandalized that I doubt if she would invite these girls again. I am sorry, but granting your unusual request is absolutely impossible."

Dicky and Harry Take the "Situation in Hand."

PURPOSELY I made my voice hesitate before the adjective. I told Avis Arlen that granting her unusual request to join the Brixton house party, uninvited, would be absolutely impossible. But if I had any malicious little hope that she would be disconcerted by the thrust, it was thwarted by the aplomb with which she saw the inevitable, accepted it, and turned it to her own advantage.

"Oh, I am so sorry," she said with a pretty contrite air which she managed to infuse with an appealing pathos. It gave me an absurd feeling of having been brutal to her which did not decrease my resentment toward her.

"You will forgive me, won't you, dear Mrs. Graham?" she cooed, putting her hand upon my arm, but an air of timidity that infuriated me, for I realized that she had the cool assurance and persistence of a traveling salesman. "It was because I did not understand. It is all so different in the homes of my friends. They are so hospitable."

The impulse to defend Helma Brixton from the implied aspersion was almost overpowering. For I knew that the reputation I just had given her was most unjust. Marion could have taken up a half dozen extra friends with her, by simply telephoning. Carolyn, by simply telephoning, could have done so. But I had instantly visualized the disrupting influence which Avis Arlen's thrust for admiration and the limelight would have upon any party of young people, and I was determined that she should not be given the chance to go up with Mary and Marion to the Brixtons. As for Noel, I surmised that the last place in the world he would wish to be was the Brixton house party, with the clinging, cloying adulation of Avis Arlen contrasted with Mary's apparent air of indifference to him, and her smiling acceptance of the admiring devotion of the college boys and cadets whom he so courted.

"There he is no question of forgiveness, my child," I said, forcing myself to a kindly note. "You simply did not realize our point of view, that is all."

Avis a Capable Opponent
Far back in Avis Arlen's gray eyes there flashed something which changed them for an instant to steel. It lasted only for a second, but I knew then, what I had guessed before, that she was not quite the morose she appeared in her affections, but comprehended perfectly what I was doing and my reasons for my action.

With the quickness of a cobra she changed her point of attack and turned to Noel.

"You'll just have to be good to Avis," she said smiling widely at him, "because she hasn't anybody else but you. And you'll be all alone, too. We'll just have to console each other while all the rest go off to their old place."

I caught the furtive glance which she sent Mary while she was talking, but in the expressive jargon of our English cousins, she got no change out of her. Mary's composure did not change by so much as the flicker of an eyelash, and the open, smiling, absolutely impersonal look with which she met the other girls' sally was perfect.

"Noel's a great little consoiler," she said, and I knew Noel was smiling at the faint tinkle of decision in her voice. "Try his brand of consolation, number 18, the one for loneliness and frustration. It's a wiz."

"Mary!" he exclaimed in helpless indignation, and I wondered if he ever were going to get a chance to say anything else. And then he heard me and the welcome sound of a relief expedition in Harry Underwood's voice.

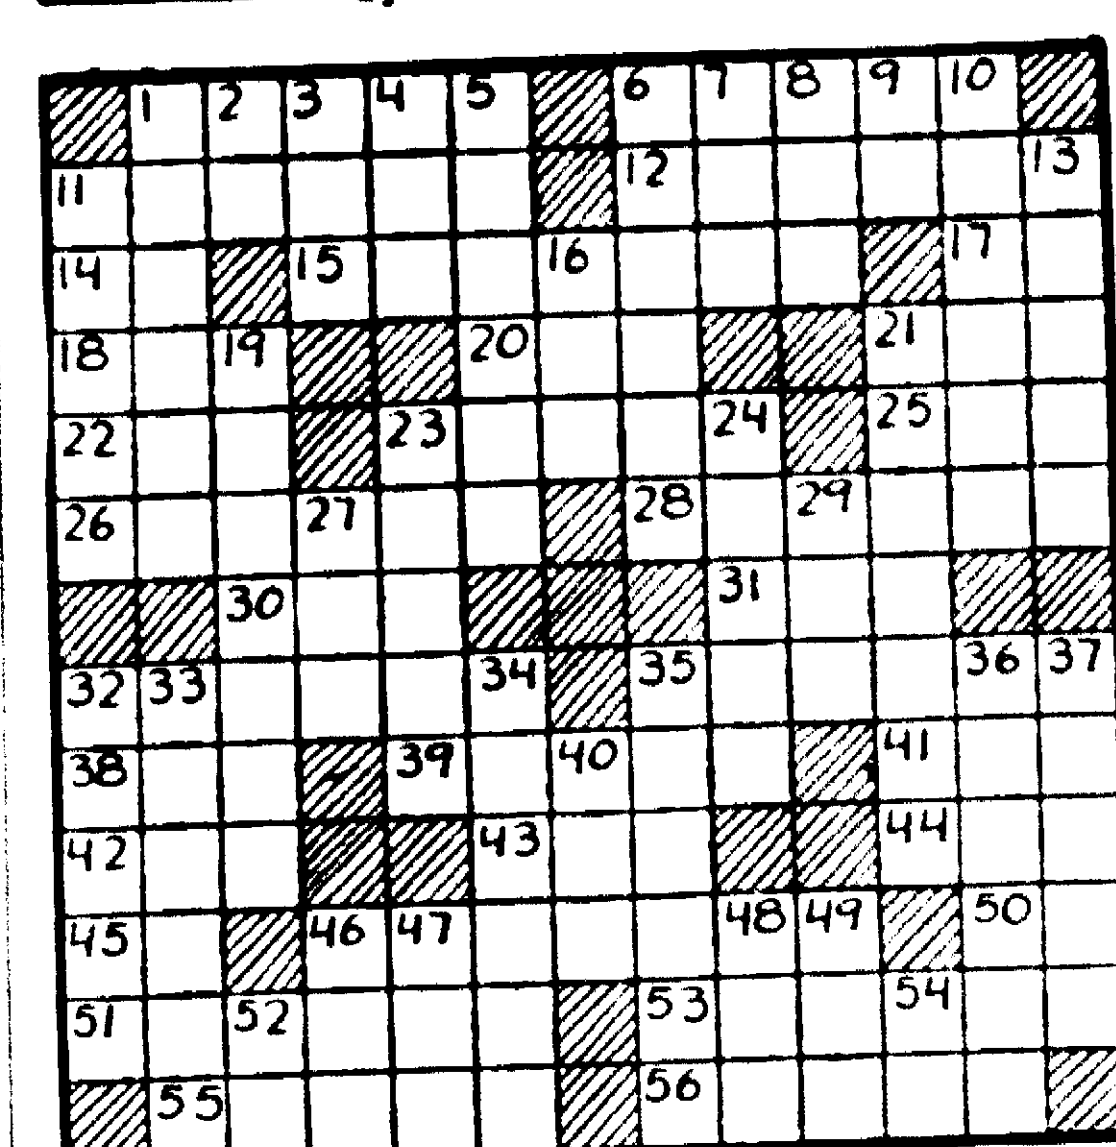

"What's the matter with this younger generation anyway?" he demanded, and as I turned, I saw that he had Mrs. Arlen upon his arm, and that Dicky was ranged on the other side of her. At the far end of the room Lillian Veritzen, and I sensed the message which they were sending me before it was delivered.

"You three boys need a pace-maker," Mr. Underwood went on. "Wasting time in talking which might be spent in dancing. Miss Arlen, I've been watching you, and I realize that all my life I've been waiting for this moment—the chance to dance with you."

She dimpled and smiled up at him with a facile play of darkened eyelashes.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MONTIMER LEWIS

TOMORROW will be the Fourth of July. But it is hard to think of two baby leopards and the Fourth of July all at the same time. If I didn't have my leopards I would be thinking about the Fourth all the time.

I let Jubilee down by his rope and then I went down out to the milk pail and when the bunch got there and I was milking Feeble it would be a good idea to let the leopards take the milk right from the cows. I'm not always so very brave. I took the leopards and I took it to the Younisia one and set on the stool and told it to go to it, and it took a small and then it went to it like it was trying to eat up the milk and as soon as it grabbed hold the cow began to kick, and she almost got me before I could get Younisia to let go. I rolled over the leopards and the barn hanging on to my leopards, and Feeble grinned and said I ought to have better sense than to try a thing like that. I couldn't say anything because she was right.

When I had fed my face we all took the cows to the pasture and the girls went along, and we all had an idea that we ought to learn the leopards to swim, so we hustled home so fast that our tongues almost hung out, and when I got there I didn't have any more leopards than a rabbit. My mother said a man from the park in the city had been there and had given her five dollars each for them to put in the zoological gardens. I said I didn't know why anyone would want leopards to put in a garden. I asked her if she thought they were carrots or something. I told her I wouldn't have been surprised if my father or my aunt had done that way, a fellow don't expect his own mother to sell his leopards.

She gave me half the money and told me I better go and spend it, because my father might want to make me save it when he found out about it. So we all went and bought fireworks. I got a lot of firecrackers and torpedoes and devil-chasers and skyrockets and Roman candles, and we all went home with them, but everybody in the bunch wanted to help me carry them, so I didn't have as many of them when I got home and counted up as I did when we left the store.

CHAPTER 29
The Last Canteen

A JIMMIE HARRISON had explained to Pierre, the Black-water Tanks were small natural hollows or basins in the rocks at the foot of Mother Mountain where, for uncertain periods of time following the infrequent desert rains, water might be found.

There were no signs of living springs or underground moisture anywhere in the vicinity—no trees or bushes or grass other than the usual sparse desert vegetation.

The country round about, including the long sloping rise of Mother Mountain, was cut by gulches scarred with dykes and ledges—a jumble of various colored rocks spotted here and there with patches of thin gravelly soil.

It was midday when the man called Colorado Hill, and Bruce Carey, returned from their morning work of prospecting to their camp at the foot of a high overhanging cliff near the Tanks.

It was frightfully hot. Not a breath of air stirred over the vast expanse of desert and the two men showed the effects of their long hours of tramping over the burning slopes of the mountain.

In the thin strip of shade afforded by the cliff they dropped their picks and in turn drank long and deep from a large cloth-covered canteen which hung from a small scrubby bush in a crevice in the wall. Then removing their hats and throwing aside the smaller empty canteens which they carried they seated themselves wearily upon convenient rocks.

"Dad," said Bruce, "I've been thinking."

"You'd better not," returned Colorado. "You're liable to overheat yourself."

Disregarding the pleasantry Bruce continued: "If that old boy who left his bones and a bag of gold in Skeleton Sink really made his rich strike in this neighborhood why didn't he mark out his claim with monuments of piled up rocks and a location notice as prospectors always do?"

"Prospectors don't always stake out their claims when they make a rich strike in some wild country like this," Colorado answered. "Sometimes a man will hide his find and hotfoot it to the settlement to tip off a few of his close friends before he makes his discovery known generally."

"Then this bunch of insiders will stake out their claims together and help protect each other's interests when the big rush comes. In this case, it is generally believed that the fellow who hid his strike didn't have time enough to do his location on account of the water in the Tanks giving out. He simply had to leave and leave in a hurry."

"As well have to do in the next day or two, I suppose," said Bruce moodily.

"I figure we can stay to-morrow," returned Colorado. "If we hadn't turned the burros out, we could have held out this long. About day after tomorrow morning we'll cache our outfit here and hit the Springs. We'll find our burros and make it back to Red Butte where we can lay up until it rains. Then, with another load of supplies, we'll come back here and be good for two or three months. While we are here, though, we'll sure hang on as long as we can, because you never can tell we might find that rich lode the very last minute."

"Yeah, we might," drawled Bruce hopelessly.

"Might," retorted the other; "we will! There's not a doubt in the world about the rich vein of gold being somewhere in this vicinity. All we've got to do is to keep on covering the ground systematically, like we're doing, and we're sure to find it."

"Oh, shut up!" growled Bruce. "I've listened to your pipe dreams until I'm sick."

Colorado Hill rose slowly to his feet. For a long minute he stood looking thoughtfully down at his companion, who was hunched in a dejected posture, holding his head in his hands. Then, moving with thoughtful deliberation, the older man went to the canteen and drank again. Standing with the canteen in his hands he again studied Bruce with speculative interest.

Have a drink?" he said suddenly.

body was home, and I was just going out of the yard with the bunch when I got called back to mind Annabelle Lee while the grownups took a nap, and my father told me that if anything happened to Annabelle Lee something a whole lot worse would happen to me. So I fixed her a piece of bread and syrup and she went across the yard and sat down on an anybody's nap. But my spoiled didn't let my father do anything to me. She said it could happen to anyone. ## STIBLING PICKED TO WIN FROM GERMAN WITH ODDS AT 3-2

Fighters To Enter Ring Well-Matched; Promoters May Lose on Deal.

By Charles Dinkley

CLEVELAND, O., July 3.—Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, will defend his title tonight against the young Georgian, W. L. Young, Stibling, with the prospect of an attendance of 40,000 to 50,000, with receipts of $200,000 to $300,000.

The powerful German had who somewhat resembles Jack Dempsey in facial features and ring characteristics, will battle Stibling 15 rounds of box for the title in Cleveland's $200,000 capacity and steel stadium on the shore of Lake Erie. It will be the German's first defense of his crown since he was in a foul in four rounds from Jack Sharkey a year ago.

Stibling, the challenger, remained a 3 to 2 and 7 to 5 favorite to win the title with very little betting on the result of the battle.

On the basis of a $300,000 gate, the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Ohio, promoting the bout, may face a loss of $100,000.

Schmeling and Stibling will step into the ring as well-matched physically as any two heavyweights who ever fought. There will be less than three pounds between them in weight. They will have practically the same reach and the same height. Both finished their training strong and in perfect condition.

Schmeling will depend upon two things for victory, an aggressive attack and a jarring right hand, a punch that is devastating when it lands. The German has trained himself to fight the only way he knows—to crowd in and punch at close range. If he elects to remain away from Stibling and attempt to outbox him he may be outclassed, but by charging in and forcing the issue he hopes to keep Stibling so busy on the defensive that the Georgian will have little opportunity to start an offensive of his own.

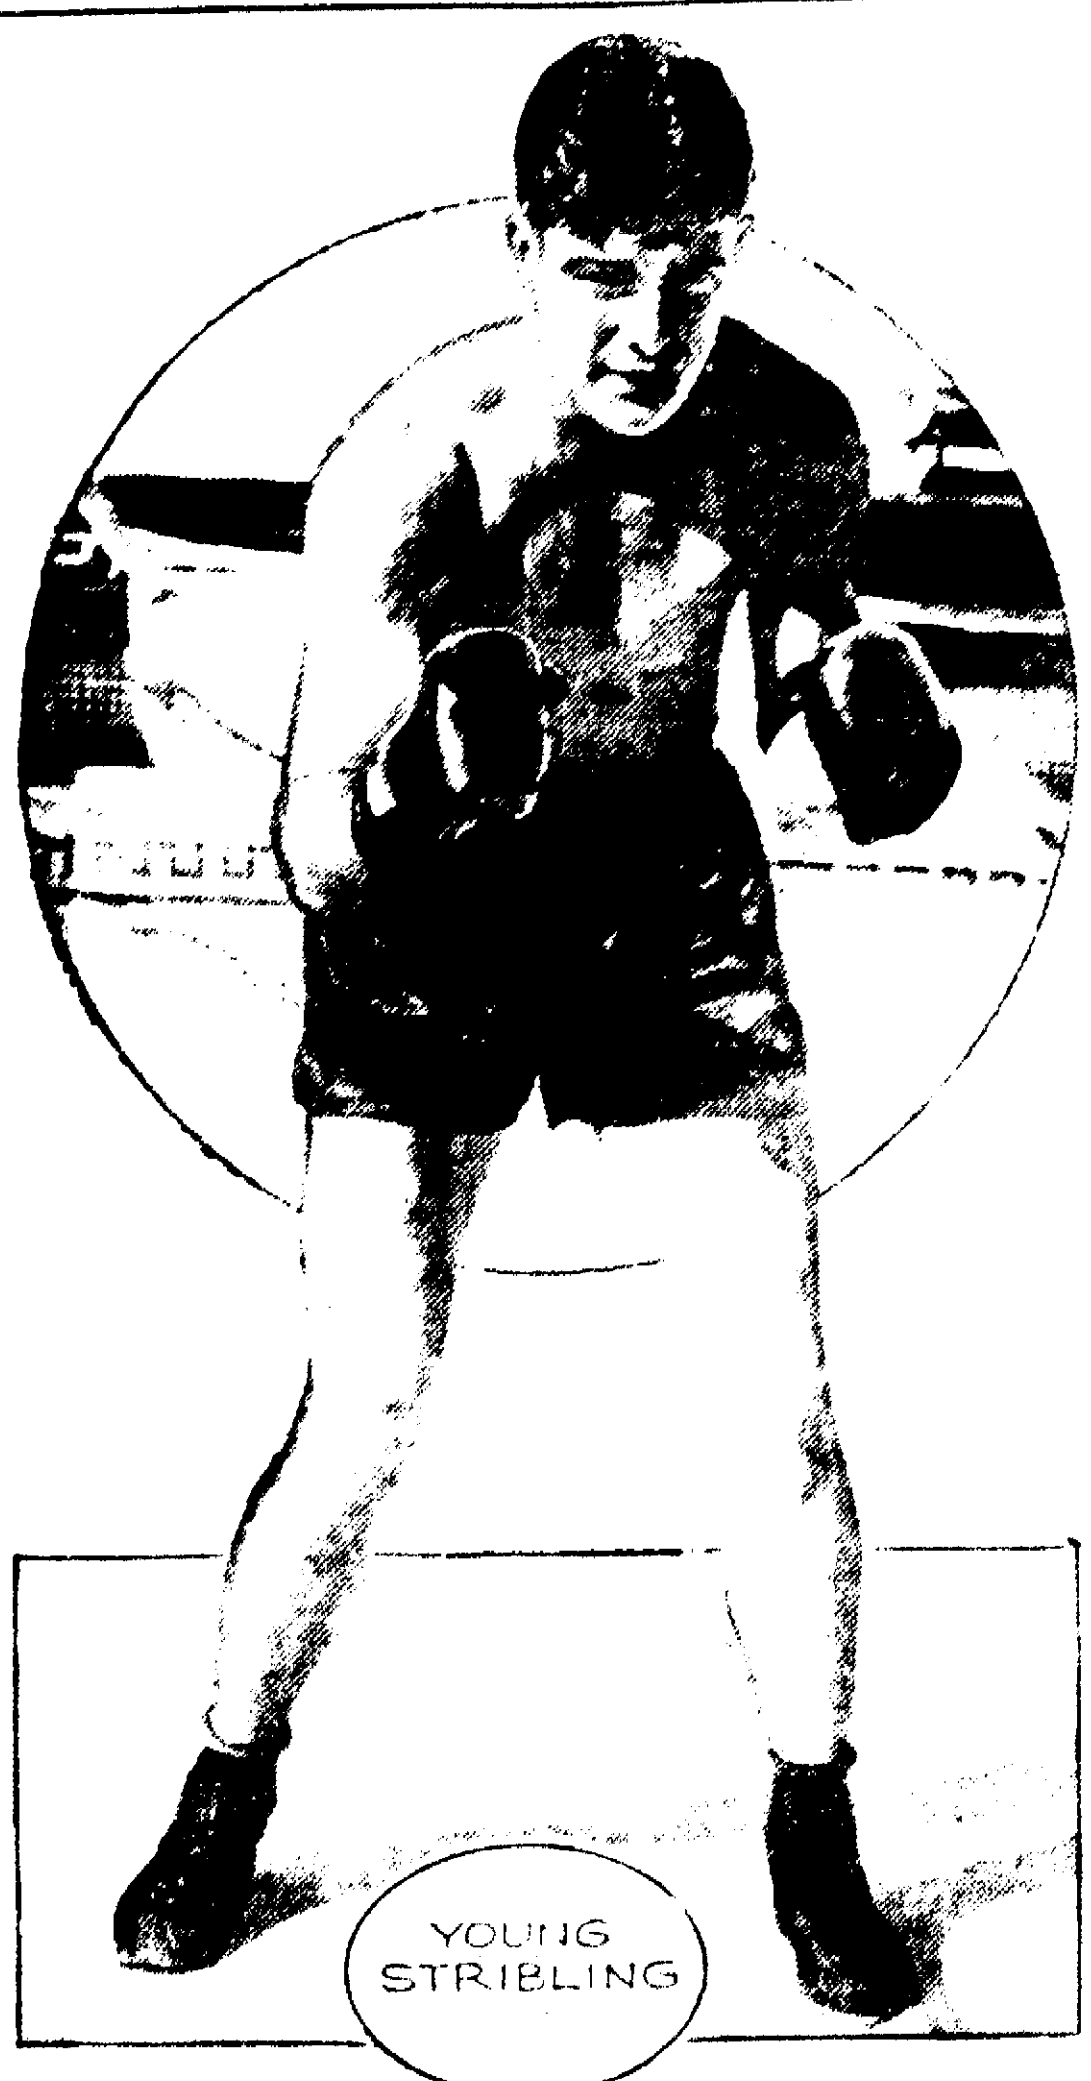

Stibling possesses greater speed and superior boxing skill than the German, far greater experience in ring craft and cunning. He is a better left-hand hitter either to the head or body and has a right-hand that also carries dynamite. But the Georgian has the reputation of having displayed at times a faint fighting heart, and there is no way of judging his mental attitude for tonight's engagement. Stibling has yet to prove that he can come through with the pressure of a championship at stake.

Schmeling and Stibling weighed in last night in the studio of WTAM, Cleveland broadcasting station, with the proceedings going to listeners throughout the nation over a NBC network. The weights were officially announced as 160 1/2 pounds for Stibling, with Schmeling scaling 180. It was the first time in the history of boxing that a weighing-in was broadcast.

While Stibling and Schmeling were resting in quiet retreats to-day, prayers went up from fight fans for rain, for a cooling breeze that would release them from terrific heat that has baked and parboiled Cleveland. The weather remained oppressively hot but with indications that the heat wave might be broken by thunderstorms before Stibling and the champion clash into the ring a few minutes after 10 o'clock tonight. The battle will be held as scheduled, unless there is a terrific downpour forcing a postponement until tomorrow night.

A special rule of the Cleveland boxing commission, governing fouls and "near-fouls" will apply at tonight's Schmeling-Stibling match. While some additional

YOUNG STIBLING

CLEVELAND, July 3.—Young Stibling believes he will win the world's heavyweight championship by a knockout within five rounds.

Max Schmeling says he will retain his crown by knocking out Stibling within 10 rounds.

These were the probable statements of the principals today.

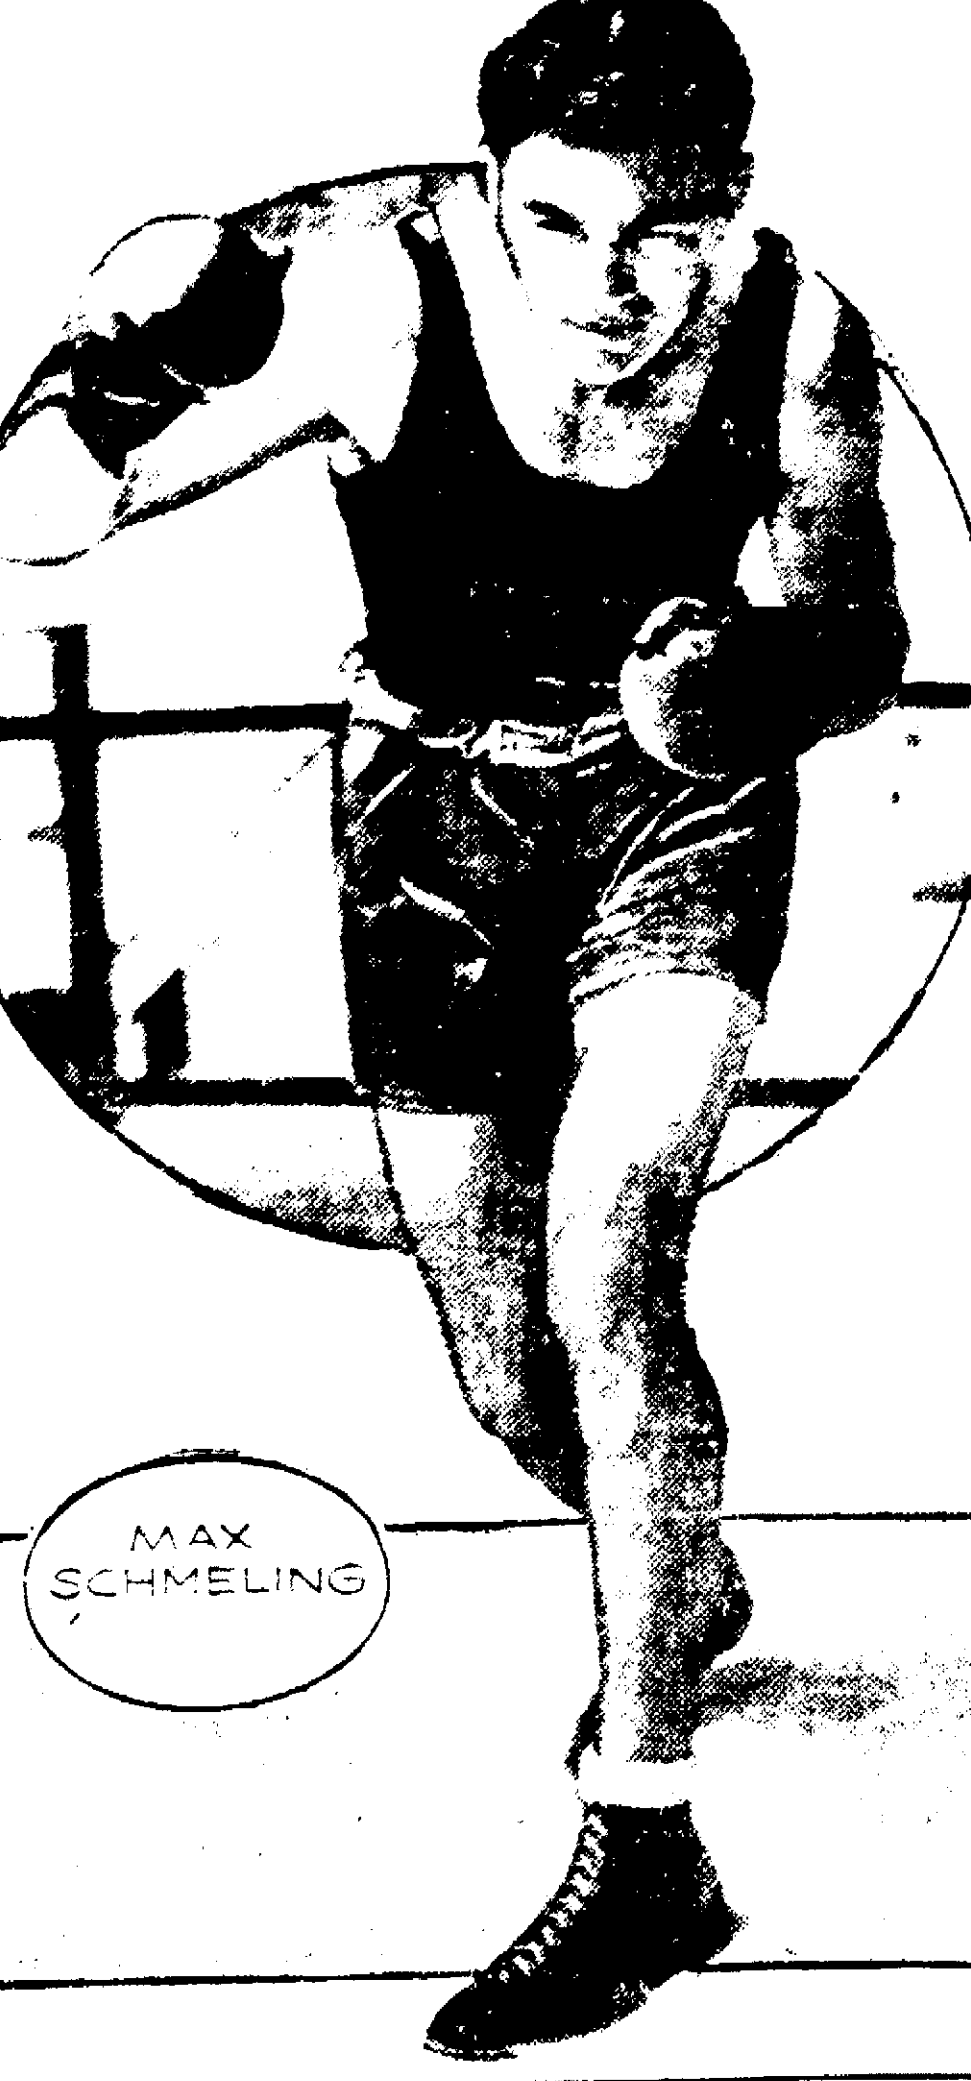

"I am in perfect condition," Stibling said, "and I never felt better in my life. I feel I will be happy then because I will have proved that I am a real champion. I can not and will not lose. My plan of battle is simple. Just to keep punching until I stop him. I am positive he cannot keep me out and that is all the chance of winning. Stibling has never faced a man who can hit as hard as I can."

"I have seen Schmeling fight," Stibling said, "and I do not underestimate his ability, but I think I can beat him, and that championship looks mighty good to me after 10 years of boxing. I have no set plans for the fight. I have paid no attention to anything I have told me about Schmeling. I fight him the way I think best after I get in there. I can tell you one thing I am not taking a lot of punches and putting everything I got behind them. If I do not win there will be no prize. But I am sure I can win decisively."

Leaders in Marion Industrial recreation ball league drew away from the rest of the pack with two teams remaining in a deadlock for the stellar honors.

As has been the case in all other leagues the last two weeks the standings were scrambled again after four contests last night.

The status of the C. D. & M. and Huber teams did not change, both nine winning last night and maintaining lead with seven victories in eight starts.

Members of the C. & O. nine went to work this morning with a headache, a hangover from the Huber's 22-to-0 victory last night. Two railroad hulsters were knocked all over the lot while Kellogg was turning in a mighty nice pitching job for the Huber. The winners scored in every inning and turned in five runs in the fourth and fifth.

Today's luck continues to follow the path of the Gasco nine, and last night it lost another close decision. This time the C. D. & M. checked off a shut-out win. The power boys grabbed off two runs in the first and another in the fifth. Apologues started the game for the winners but was pulled in the third when the Gasco started a rally. Gambie took command of the situation and left the losers off with one run.

Four teams are now tied for second place in the standings. Gasco dropped a notch as did the Roundhouse after being setback by the steam shovel after a hard-fought 2-to-1 contest. The Erie was head scoreless by Shovel until the last inning when Burke scored. Cook and Bush scored for the diggers.

The Silk Mills moved up to a second place in the standings, by blanking Fairfield 7 to 0. C. D. & M. turned in the victory for the weavers.

EAST-WEST DIAMOND GAMES BRING LITTLE CHANGE IN STANDINGS

Browns Only Teams To Materially Gain from Inter-sectional Tilts.

By Hugh S. Fullerton Jr.

Associated Press Sports Writer

At some of today's inter-sectional games in the American league seem to bring about the same result for all the clubs except the St. Louis Browns.

The Browns, who started their home campaign against the eastern leaders in last place, finished it yesterday a good fifth in the standings while the Chicago White Sox dropped from fifth to eighth place in the same time. St. Louis won 13 games and lost five while the White Sox had only five victories to 12 defeats.

The rest of the standing remained about the same with the eastern division pulling a stride ahead. The four eastern clubs pulled out a slight margin of victories, winning 31 games and losing 22.

Washington, trailing the Browns 13 to 5 in the final game yesterday, came home all square for the four with eight victories and as many defeats, but lost a game to its rival, Philadelphia and New York.

The league leading Athletics wobbled a bit toward the end and finished with nine games won and seven lost after absorbing a 12 to 1 beating from Cleveland yesterday.

The New York Yankees, aided by Bobo Fatina, nineteenth home run, finished their tour with a 15 to 1 triumph over Detroit. The Yankees won 10 games and lost eight.

Tommy Thomas pitched Chicago to a final victory over Boston, holding the Red Sox to three hits while the pair bled won 2 to 0.

In the National league where a double header today between St. Louis and Philadelphia winds up the eastern campaign, the Brooklyn Robins stood out as much as the Browns in their home stand. Out of 10-5 in Cincinnati yesterday, the Robins bunched three doubles for three runs and defeated the Reds 4 to 2.

Frank Hogan's home run and some expert fielding behind Fred Fitzsimmons enabled the Giants to reduce the St. Louis lead to 15 games with a 2 to 2 victory. Hogan closed his homer with two aboard in the fifth for all the Giant runs. The Chicago Cubs held their place three games behind the Giants by pulling out an 11 inning game with the Phillies by a 2 to 1 count.

Heinie Meine of Pittsburgh turned in the best mound performance yesterday as he limited the Boston Braves to five hits to gain a 1 to 0 decision in a duel with Bruce Cunningham.

TOLEDO, O., July 3.—Out in front of the national open championship derby galloped a quartet of dark horses today, but the Twenty Grand of golf were right behind them.

At the 72 hole chase for the most important stake of American golf charged toward the half way post on the sun searched Inverness course, the surprising pace after the first 18 hole round yesterday, were Herman Barron of Port Chester, N. Y., Mottlie Dutra of Long Beach, Calif., Charlie Guest of Dent, N. J., and Edna Williams of Cleveland, none of whom ever before caused any disturbance in national open struggles. All were fine golfers as their first round scores in the heat proved but none was expected to break the pretty well set traditions of the big show and keep ahead when the chase ends with the strenuous 36 hole fight Saturday. In the past 11 years only two golfers accomplished that feat and they were Lloyd Jones and "Long Jim" Barnes.

Within the short space of but five strokes of the four leaders came 13 of the best shot makers in the game. One away was Al Espinoza of Chicago, who tied Bobby Jones in 1929 at Winged Foot and who scored the best round in the complications of the rule may be possible, the main points are:

1. A low blow is not a foul. The fighters have agreed to wear appliances to insure complete protection against blows below the belt.
2. If one of the fighters should go to the floor after receiving a low blow and does not arise before a count of 10, he will be taken to his corner for a maximum rest period of five minutes, after which the bout shall be continued.
3. Should the injured man refuse to continue the fight after the rest, in the event the referee deems he really is able to continue, he will lose the fight on a technical knockout and forfeit his entire purse.
4. If the injured man refuses to continue after injury from a low blow and if the referee agrees he is unable to continue, the bout will be declared "no contest."
5. The fighter who lands a low blow will lose the round in which it is struck and a substantial part of his share in the receipts.

qualifying round of the open this year. Five others of international fame, Billie Burke of Greenwich Conn., one of the big stars of America's 1931 Ryder cup team, Billie Dacies and Fred Robson, two of England's best marksmen of the link, Joe Turney of White Plains, N. Y., a dangerous rival in any tournament and the ever reliable and steady MacDonald Smith of New York, who finished second at Interlachen last year, were still formidable. Walter Hagen of Detroit and confident Gene Sarazen of New York, two of the heaviest played favorites were in nice spots with 74's while the dangerous Tommy Armour of Detroit, Lee Degele of Agua Caliente, George Von Elm of Chicago, and big Ed Deane of Wilmington, Del., could be counted out because of their 75's.

Several others thoroughly capable of helping to give the championship the wildest finish in its 35 years of play were sandbagged in with these 13. They were Henry Clout of Bridgeport, Conn. 73, Frank Wald of Chicago, 73, Tony Marone of Elmsford, N. Y., 74, Bobby Gracie of New York, 74, and Al Watrous of Detroit, 74.

Jack Thompson Youngstown, O., professional, who finished close to the leaders in the first round, was disqualified today, at the outset of the second round because of a one stroke error in the score posted to his credit yesterday. He was given a 75, but actually failed a 76.

Thompson discovered the mix take himself and reported it to officials of the United States Golf association this morning shortly before he was scheduled to tee off with Clarence Gamber of Pontiac, Mich. Under the rules, however, which specify competitors must satisfy themselves before the cards are handed in, as to the correctness of the scores, the U. S. G. A. had no alternative than to disqualify Thompson.
